

I printed a cord organizer which is shaped like a snowflake. I wanted to print this because I am constantly rolling up my computer cords, my phone charger, and now my tablet charger and shoving them in my backpack and hoping for the best. The snowflake worked a lot better than I imagined. I originally thought the snowflake shape was just decorative but it proved to be really useful in wrapping the cords tightly. Most of the cord organizing designs I looked at were for headphones. The things I would add to this design are a way for my charger block to be held to the snowflake and I'd probably make it bigger so that it could actually hold my entire computer charger cords at once, right now it really only sort of works for my phone charger because it is smaller. I was impressed that the design worked just as well for flat cords as well as round ones. I would also suggest making part of the design work for covering the end of the cords. I also find it strange that the design makes the cords create a circular shape around the snowflake, where I believe other designs kept the cords flat.
